What Rhymes With Babe?

A common English word for which there is only one rhyme is "babe," and it was Swinburne who used it with exquisite appropriateness in "A Rhyme."

Babe, if rhyme to none,
For that sweet, soundless
Babe, the sweetest one,
I'll have heard,

Right it is and meet,
Rhyme should keep, not true,
True with such a sweet
Thing as you.

For aye, with yearning,
Home to astroble,
Takes the sun's height, burning
Over the babe.

So even that rhyme is barred now. "Silence" is another word beloved of poets that has no rhyme. Mrs. Browning went to the very limits of her passion for avoidance when she rhymed it with "Deslands"—From the London Chronicle.

There is no doubt but what the use of oleomargarine has much increased since the United States entered into the war. This has been partly due to the high price of first class butter and the recommendation that we make use of fats of other fats. The nation however has also learned something of the wholesomeness and purity of oleomargarine and Mrs. Helen Huntington Downing who is to lecture here next week under the auspices of The World will tell us more about the same. She will also speak on patriotic talk on patriotic food conservation.

Mrs. Downing knows the whole story of the making of oleomargarine, from the selection of the materials, clean, wholesome fats, through the special mixing, the government inspection to the sanitary wrapping and packing of the tasty food. She will also speak on patriotic food and household hints. She will welcome this opportunity of knowing more about it. Mrs. Downing will talk of other fat alternatives besides oleomargarine. She will have something new and interesting to say on wheatless breads and sugar-saving hints.

She will also speak on the question of food conservation from a personal as well as a national viewpoint will be discussed. This lecture is free and all housewives are invited to come and bring pen and notebook.
